TODAY'S COVER

Features sophomore sensations Brian Baschnagel (48), Cornelius Greene (7) and Archie Griffin (45) all starters in the Buckeyes' offensive backfield. Baschnagel, an excellent runner and receiver at wingback, is also a talented punt and kickoff return man. Greene, at quarterback, has given Ohio State an added dimension with his quickness. Griffin, playing his second season at tailback, has rushed for 888 yards this year and has 1,755 in just under two full seasons.

MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY

Michigan State University has had a profound impact on higher education. At its founding in 1855, it opened the doors to higher learning for the first time to a great many young Americans. One of the nation's leading academic institutions, Michigan State today continues to pursue innovative approaches to public education and service. Under the leadership of its 14th president, Dr. Clifton R. Wharton, Jr., Michigan State is responding in new ways to the needs of an increasingly complex society.

More than 40,000 attend MSU, the state's largest institution of higher learning. In terms of excellence, as well as size, its proportions are impressive: it is a leader in attracting national merit scholars and producing winners of National Science Foundation awards.

MSU's students — from 85 foreign nations, every state, and every county in Michigan — pursue a wealth of academic programs in 17 colleges, a school for advanced graduate studies and an honors college. Michigan State is the nation's only university with three schools of medicine: human, veterinary and osteopathic. Other curricula range from fine arts to business, engineering, food science and high-energy physics. Respected for its teacher education program, Michigan State also offers programs in innovative fields designed to meet problems in the ghettos, developing nations and highly urbanized society. Prominent in this effort is the new College of Urban Development.

Supporting the strong academic curriculum are an internationally acclaimed faculty and outstanding research facilities where some 2,100 research projects are underway. In addition to such campus facilities as the cyclotron, the nuclear reactor and the Atomic Energy Commission's plant research laboratory, MSU utilizes nearby communities for social research and conducts agricultural research at experiment stations throughout the state.

The 5,000-acre campus in East Lansing, which was once rolling farmland, is a city in itself, with its own fleet of buses, public safety department, hospital, health center, counseling center, radio and television stations. More than 20,000 students reside in university apartments and residence halls which offer a wide range of living options to meet individual needs and desires.

BEFORE THE GAME

By Steve Snapp

Assistant Sports Information Director

It won't seem right today, not seeing the familiar figure of Hugh "Duffy" Daugherty on the Michigan State sidelines. Daugherty, the quick-witted, always smiling Irishman who coached the Spartans from 1954 until the completion of last season, has become symbolic of MSU football. His departure signals the end of an era at East Lansing.

Duffy produced a number of great teams during his 19-year stay with the Spartans. His 1965 squad was National Champion and finished second in 1966 and again in 1967. Twice he won outright Big Ten titles and was second on four other occasions. In all, the man who worked his way out of a Pennsylvania coal mine and into the national limelight won 109 of 183 games as the Spartans' grid boss.

Ohio State is one of the few schools over which Duffy did not hold an edge. In nine meetings with the Buckeyes, he won four and lost five. He did, however, have the satisfaction of winning the last two encounters, 17-10 in 1971 and 19-12 last year. The latter, a major upset, came the week after Duffy announced his retirement and has to be considered one of his greatest wins.

With Daugherty gone, former defensive coordinator Denny Stolz assumes command of the Spartan football machine. He would like nothing better than to continue MSU's recent mastery over the Buckeyes, but after last week's disastrous Iowa game in which three regulars were lost for the season, the chances of an upset by the 3-5 Spartans over top-ranked and unbeaten Ohio State (7-0) seem slight.

Quarterback Charlie Baggett, offensive tackle Philip Smolinski and center Charlie Ane are the three injured Spartans. All three suffered knee injuries and all three underwent surgery on Sunday.

The loss of Baggett, who will be replaced by seldom used sophomore Tyrone Willingham, will be especially serious to the MSU offense. Baggett, a 6-0 junior, not only led the team in passing with 516 yards on 38 completions in 98 attempts, but also was the Spartans' top rusher with 313 yards in 98 carries. Willingham finished out the Iowa game and hit on three of five passes for 25 yards and one touchdown in the Spartans' 21-0 win. It was the second consecutive Big Ten victory for MSU and left the Spartans with a 2-3 Conference mark.

Willingham will be working with two veterans in the offensive backfield, fullback Clarence Bullock and tailback David Brown. Bullock, 5-11, 200, has carried the ball 65 times for 295 yards. Brown, like Bullock a junior, has 80 carries for 235 yards. The 5-10, 183-pound speedster has rushed for two touchdowns.

Defensively Michigan State appears to be in good physical shape with linebackers Ray Nester and Terry McClowry leading the way. Nester has 41 solo tackles to his credit and 58 assists for a whopping 99 total tackles. McClowry is just a step behind with 95 total participations for the Spartans who specialize in hard nose football.

Michigan State will meet a healthy Buckeye squad. The one exception could be safety Rich Parsons who injured a shoulder in last week's 30-0 win over Illinois and might be held out of today's action. With Parsons sidelined, the safety spot will be manned by Bruce Ruhl, a freshman from Southfield, Michigan.

The number one ranked Buckeyes have recorded a 5-0 Big Ten record and have played superb football the past few weeks, both on offense and defense.

Tailback Archie Griffin, who chalked up his seventh consecutive 100-yard rushing game against Illinois with 108, leads the offense and now has 888 yards on the year — 21 yards more than he had all of last season.

His sophomore companion, quarterback Cornelius Greene, has added 574 and has a fancy 6.9 average each time he lugs the leather.

Both, of course, are running behind one of the finest offensive lines in Ohio State history, led by All-America tackle John Hicks, guard Jim Kregel and center Steve Myers.

Defensively, the Buckeyes have accomplished almost the impossible, holding seven opponents to 20 points, recording two consecutive shutouts and three in the last four games, allowing just two touchdowns on the year and in general not allowing the opposition on the Ohio State side of the 50-yard line.

Today's game is the 14th meeting between Ohio State and Michigan State. MSU has won seven and lost six. The Buckeyes hope the series will be tied by the end of this afternoon's contest.

PLAYERS TO WATCH

MICHIGAN STATE

WILLIAM SIMPSON — DEFENSIVE BACK — Probably Michigan State's foremost candidate for post-season all-star selection. He was an All-Big Ten selection as a junior, a fine punter and punt return man, a ball hawk at his safety position and a tough tackler. He led Big Ten last season in punt return average. He also tied for first in punting average at 40.5 yards per kick, and total interceptions with six.

JOHN SHINSKY — DEFENSIVE TACKLE — Keystone of Michigan State's defensive line with proven credentials of desire and combativeness. Has overcome a succession of knee injuries to become one of the top performers at his position in the Big Ten. Outstanding for Spartans in leadership role and is team co-captain this fall.

OHIO STATE

DICK MACK — OFFENSIVE GUARD — Graded out as the top offensive guard and center last week with a grade of 72% against a rugged Illinois defense. Mack, relatively small for his position at 5-11, 218, has improved each week and has been one of the Buckeyes' most consistent linemen.

RANDY GRADISHAR — LINEBACKER — Named defensive player of the week for his play against Illinois and also honored for making the play of the game. Gradishar forced two fumbles against the Illini and intercepted a pass to set up a third touchdown. The 6-3, 230 pound senior received five and a half Buckeye leaves after last week's performance.

NCAA Sponsors 33 National Championships

The 1973-74 intercollegiate athletic season will mark the first time in history that the NCAA will hold national championships in three divisions. In addition to the first-ever championships in National Collegiate Division III, the coming season also marks the 90th anniversary for the National Collegiate Tennis Championship. This is the oldest National Collegiate Championship contested. It was held for the first time in 1883.

Two other firsts will occur in 1973-74. The NCAA will crown its first football champions in Divisions II and III, and lacrosse will be contested for a national championship in Division II for the first time.

The new divisional make-up of the Association, which was established at a Special Convention in August 1973, will increase in number the more than 7,500 student-athletes who now compete annually in NCAA-sponsored events. Through the years, over 6,100 competitors representing 234 institutions have earned the coveted title of "National Collegiate Champion." Following is the month-by-month schedule of NCAA championships which are slated for 1973-74.

Not long ago Woody Hayes described All-America tackle John Hicks as the best offensive lineman to play at Ohio State since Jim Parker. Now Hayes wants to revise that evaluation.

"Based on the way John has played this year I would now have to say he is the best offensive lineman that has ever played for me, including Jim Parker," the veteran coach noted.

Hayes' praise is especially noteworthy because Parker, the Outland Trophy winner in 1956, is considered one of the finest linemen ever to play college football. In addition to receiving the Outland, given annually to the top lineman in college football, Parker was a two time All-America and has recently been inducted into the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame.

"I know that is a strong statement to make," Hayes continued, "but John is deserving of such praise. He has given us more great games since his sophomore season than even Jim Parker did and on that basis I have to call John the best I have ever seen."

Hayes, who is in the midst of his 23rd season at Ohio State, feels he has plenty of support when it comes to Hicks.

"One of the reasons we know he is great is because other coaches and players tell us so," Hayes says. "Hardly a game goes by without that happening and that has to be one of the greatest tributes an athlete can receive."

One of the keys to Hicks' greatness is his tremendous physical ability. The former Cleveland John Hay High School standout carries a muscular 255 pounds on his 6-3 frame and is one of the Buckeyes' most agile linemen. He also has great speed.

Evidence of the latter was apparent earlier this season when sophomore tailback Archie Griffin broke loose on a 93-yard kickoff return and Hicks led the downfield blocking.

But strength and speed are just two of Hicks' assets according to Hayes.

"John's ability is limitless," Hayes praises. "He is a highly intelligent player who completely understands football and all of its complexities. Few players can react as well to stunts or other changes in blocking assignments once they are actually at the line of scrimmage.

"I think unquestionably he is the best offensive lineman in college football.

"Besides those qualities, John is a great inspirational player and team leader. His value to our team is inestimable."

JOHN HICKS: All-American

Many of the Buckeye players also appreciate having Hicks on their side, especially the running backs.

One in particular is fullback Harold Henson who, until he was hurt against Texas Christian this year, earned his living running off-tackle plays.

"You just know John is going to open up the hole," declares Henson. "In a short yardage or goal line situation he is unbeatable. He always seems to give the team a lift just when we need it the most."

Henson, from tiny Ashville, Ohio, a rural community south of Columbus, still vividly remembers his first game in massive Ohio Stadium.

"I had never even seen 85,000 people before," he recalls. "I was scared to death the day of the game until I looked over and saw John sitting calmly in front of his locker. Just seeing his composure helped calm me down.

Hicks might be the picture of serenity in the locker room but on the field it's another story. Big John wildly leads the team on to the playing field before each game, leaping into the air and yelling frantically. Once the game begins, he becomes the team "holler guy" both on the field and from the sidelines, urging his teammates on to what he feels is certain victory.

"I guess I am a little more emotional than most players," the big tackle adds, "but in way that's good because if my yelling helps get the other guys fired up, then I feel like I am contributing to the team effort."

"I always think we are going to win," Hicks says in a very factual manner. "You have to go into every game with that attitude.

Winning has become a habit for Hicks since coming to Ohio State. As a sophomore John broke into the starting lineup of the 1970 team that won nine straight games and the Big Ten Championship before being upset by Stanford in the Rose Bowl. A knee injury forced him to miss all of the 1971 season, but he bounced back last year to lead the offense in playing time enroute to another Conference title and a 9-2 record. Only a disappointing Rose Bowl loss to Southern California spoiled an otherwise brilliant 1972 comeback by Hicks, who was a unanimous All-Conference choice and also gained a spot on the Associated Press All-American team.

Hicks has set three goals for the current season: winning the Big Ten, an unprecedented third trip to the Rose Bowl and winning the National Championship. Should the first goal become a reality, John will be the first Big Ten player ever to participate in three Rose Bowls.

"It would be nice to play in three Rose Bowls," admits Hicks, who was given an additional year of eligibility because of his knee injury. "But it would be even nicer to win one, because that would mean closing my collegiate career on a winning note and probably as National Champions.

"We had the national title wrapped up in 1970 until Stanford beat us, and if we had beaten Southern Cal last year I think we would have been in the running again. So after two narrow misses I am hoping for one more chance."

Not surprisingly, Hicks is considered a shoo-in for All-American again this season and has also been mentioned as a candidate for the Outland Trophy.

"Just to be mentioned for the Outland Trophy is a real honor," Hicks says. "But before I even think about how I do, I want the team to have a successful year. If that happens, then the other things follow and that's great, but it isn't fair to put yourself ahead of the team."

That's the way John Hicks looks at things and that is just one more reason he is a great football player.

Marching Band Takes On Feminine Touch

By Jack Torry

The first girl to march in the Ohio State University band didn't realize the tradition she was breaking.

Becky Parker, a pretty 18-year-old freshman from Dennison, who is the only girl to march in all four Ohio State home games, said she didn't know it was an all-male band.

"I didn't realize it would be such a big deal for a girl to make the band," she said. In our high school band there were a lot more girls than guys. If I had known it was so important before hand I probably would have become scared and might have chickened out.

"After I got home from the first game, it was in all the newspapers. I started reading the stories myself and that is the first time I even knew Ohio State has had an all-male band for 95 years."

Becky, a trumpet player, is one of five girls to make the Ohio State band as alternates, but she is the only girl to have marched in every game. Band alternates are allowed to challenge another bandsman for a spot on Monday and Tuesday nights at practice. Becky has made the grade every time.

Ironically, after all the debating over allowing women in the band, the first girl to march doesn't consider herself a women's activist.

"I didn't have any thoughts about women's lib," Becky said. "That's something I'm not even concerned with . . . they can do what they want."

"This was something I wanted to do. It was a personal victory . . . it didn't have anything to do with women's lib. I don't feel as though I'm some big deal."

Still, it was quite a tradition broken. Dr. Paul Droste, the band director, said the bandsmen were "disappointed when the decision to let girls in came through last year. But they've had time to get over it."

Becky, maintains she hasn't been aware of any hostility.

"I told Dr. Droste that he could never make me believe these guys were mad about girls being in the band," Becky said. "I've never heard any of the guys say 'I wish there weren't girls in the band.' They've all been really nice to me."

"They haven't been prejudiced for me or against me," she continued, "I really feel like one of the guys, which is good, because you don't feel like you're out of place."

Still the novelty of being the first woman in the band has given Becky a few rough moments.

"The first game, we were kneeling before we went out on the field," she explains. "All of a sudden, everybody's telling me to turn around. I'd turn and there would be a camera there. It made me even more nervous than I was. And believe me, I was really, really nervous.

"A couple of times I didn't want my picture taken. One time the guys crowded around me because I asked a lady not to take my picture. She persisted . . . she was really mean about it, so all the guys crowded around me. I'm shorter than anyone else so she didn't get the picture she wanted."

But Becky has learned to accept such occupational hazards.

"I guess I will be kind of a novelty for awhile," she says, "but I am sure it will wear off."

Meanwhile Becky Parker just keeps going to band practice each day and marching at the games on Saturday — just like one of the guys.

Ohio National serves you a smile at a time.

Individual, friendly service. That's what Ohio National likes to give. We have services to personally fill your every banking need. Checking accounts, savings plans, all kinds of loans, trust services, Master Charge privileges—plus many more services to work for you. And with more offices around than any other bank in town, we make banking more convenient.

Especially with our Anytime Banks. They don't smile at you, but do offer the most frequently used banking services any time of the day or night. Including a Master Charge cash advance.

Ohio National Bank. We have all the banking services you'll ever need. And you get each of them with a smile.

After three hours in hard wooden seats, spilled mustard and a roaring crowd, recuperate in Monte Carlo.

A football stadium is a great place to spend a Saturday afternoon in autumn. But, after the game, you're ready for some peace and quiet, some comfort and some elegance.

That's why the Monte Carlo is a great place to spend a Saturday evening in autumn.

Monte Carlo's radial-tuned suspension is designed to let you enjoy the advantages of its steel-belted radial ply tires.

The result is the kind of confident handling and comfortable ride you might expect from a fine personal luxury car.

Power disc/drum brakes and variable-ratio power steering are standard. of course. Because it just wouldn't be a Monte Carlo without them.

When you're ready to leave the roaring crowd behind, get behind the wheel of a 1974 Monte Carlo by Chevrolet.

Chevrolet. Building a better way to see the U.S.A.

PROF BRINGS ART TO THE PEOPLE

By The Ohio State University News Service

Brightening a hall of Ohio State University's Community Extension Center is a mural completed by a class of Robert Stull, above, associate professor of art and black studies.

Art should be on the side of a building by a vacant lot as well as hanging on a museum wall, says an associate professor at Ohio State University, who feels strongly that art should be part of daily life.

So, Robert Stull and students in his classes have been painting murals and plan others to brighten spots in Columbus' inner city. With a joint appointment in the black studies department and the art division, Stull has many ideas and plans to bring art into people's lives.

He is planning exhibits of reproductions of works by African and Afro-American artists for public schools and business places, including hardware stores and other shops where people are not accustomed to seeing "something visually interesting." Also, slide files of black artists' creations are being assembled.

Children, ages 7 to 13, in a community class that he runs created and presented a musical drama for which they made African masks, musical instruments, stage sets, and costumes, and wrote a play.

He designed a series of three consecutive courses on the history of art by blacks in America from the 1600's to contemporary times.

These are just a few of the dozen projects Stull has become involved in since coming to Ohio State a year ago. Most of his activities revolve around the concept of bringing art and people together.

"My feeling," Stull said, "is derived from the African concept of art — that it should be part of the everyday ongoing process and should relate to people.

"Originally, art was integrated into daily life as primitive man embellished his tools and utensils. Western art in the late 19th or early 20th century came to be something separate and outside of most people's lives."

The dynamic Stull earned his bachelor's and master's degrees in art from Ohio State in 1962 and 1963, respectively. Previously, he studied photography in Japan while he was in the service.

Originally from Springfield, O., he directed the Greenwich House of Pottery in New York City from 1963-65 and returned to Japan on a Fulbright Research Grant for two years. He went back to his position in New York for a year before joining the University of Michigan faculty in 1968.

After a leave of absence from Michigan to teach at Ohio State, Stull recently resigned to continue his work in Columbus.

His own creative work has shifted from ceramics to painting, but encompasses sculpture, photography, and jewelry making.

In addition, he is writing a book on Columbus woodcarver and sculptor Elijah Pierce and on black artists in Detroit past and present.

Stull's works are in 500 private collections and 30 public collections around the country including one of the Smithsonian Institute, which is being exhibited in Europe, and Johnson Publications' permanent collection in Chicago.

He has had 30 one-man exhibits and works in 100 group exhibitions.

OHIO STATE'S SUPPORTING CAST

Coaches and athletes receive most of the attention during a Saturday afternoon football game. But behind every game there are hours of hard work by secretarial staffs, equipment men, trainers and many more. The preparation of these behind the scenes people is vital to the success of the athletic program.

Football secretaries Lena Biscuso (L) and Linda Fiscus (R) coordinate the many interior workings of the football office.

Building an organization is much like building a football team. You secure key personnel and use good coaching and concentrate on the fundamentals of the game, progress will appear and championship form can be attained.

Here in our agency, we have key personnel who have done a great job of recruiting quality men and women. Pictured on this page are some of the key personnel who do an excellent job of coaching and guiding our trainees into becoming successful, established career life underwriters. This is a career lifetime opportunity. Qualified individuals may be promoted to management. If you are a person who has a competitive background, has been serious about success and truly desires a career — not a job — why not call Michael J. Murray, Jr., C.L.U. or one of the other agency coaches of the Murray Agency.

OUR IRISH WALKING HAT

MADE EXCLUSIVELY FOR US
IN IRELAND AND SCOTLAND

The Irish and Scottish cloth designers have long been famed the world over for their beautiful colourings and blendings of colours and much of their inspiration comes from their mountain-, land-, and sea-scapes.

These have set the standard for hat wearers in this country for many years.

Many of our patrons proudly tell us they have worn the same "walking hat" since their undergraduate days.

Available in Tweeds, Donegals, Cheviots,
Shetlands and Homespun.

From $14.00 to $22.50
